

Law360's Project Finance Editorial Advisory Board

Law360 (April 9, 2019, 2:14 PM EDT) -- Law360 is pleased to announce the formation of its 2019 Project Finance Editorial Advisory Board.

The purpose of the editorial advisory board is to get feedback on Law360's coverage and gain insight from experts in the field on how best to shape future coverage.

The members of Law360's 2019 Project Finance Editorial Advisory Board are:

Neeraj Arora, Morgan Lewis & Bockius LLP

Neeraj Arora's practice focuses on project development and/or financing of a broad range of large energy infrastructure assets, including conventional (gas and coal) and renewable (energy storage, solar, wind, biomass and geothermal) power generation projects, transmission lines and pipelines. He also has significant experience working on energy storage projects.

Mona Dajani, Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman LLP

Mona Dajani serves as a lead lawyer in complex acquisitions, dispositions, financing and project development transactions involving energy and infrastructure facilities in the U.S. and around the world. Dajani focuses her global practice on project finance, corporate finance, mergers and acquisitions, portfolio acquisitions, tax equity, construction and/or restructuring for government and private clients involving energy and infrastructure projects.

Ron Erlichman, Bracewell LLP

Ron Erlichman co-chair's the project finance practice at Bracewell. While focusing largely on energy projects, Erlichman maintains a diverse practice and has experience with the finance and development of thermal and renewable energy projects, transmission facilities, petrochemical facilities, terminals, transportation projects, hospitality and social infrastructure projects and sports and entertainment venues.

Christopher Gladbach, Orrick Herrington & Sutcliffe LLP

Christopher Gladbach, a partner in Orrick's Washington, D.C., office, counsels energy and infrastructure clients structuring complex equity and debt investments. He advises both buyers and sellers in the power sector in mergers, acquisitions and joint ventures and on the development of large-scale energy projects.

Brian Greene, Kirkland & Ellis LLP

Brian Greene, a debt finance partner in Kirkland & Ellis' Washington, D.C., office, focuses on the representation of private equity funds, institutional investors, developers and lenders in domestic and international project finance, energy and infrastructure projects, particularly in the U.S. and Latin America.

John Leonti, Troutman Sanders LLP

John Leonti leads the firm's project finance practice and helps clients structure, negotiate, document and execute complex financial transactions in the energy sector, including tax equity and hedge transactions. He is counsel to independent power producers, power marketers, major utilities and their competitive subsidiaries, tax equity investors, lenders, investment banks and private investment funds.

Elicia Ling, Paul Hastings LLP

Elicia Ling is a partner in the Latin America energy and infrastructure practice at Paul Hastings. Ling has represented sponsors and lenders in numerous financing and infrastructure development transactions throughout Latin America. Her experience encompasses a wide range of sectors, including power, oil and gas, mining, infrastructure, shipping and agricultural commodities.

George Miller, Mayer Brown LLP

George Miller is a partner in Mayer Brown's global projects and infrastructure groups. Most recently he worked on the $600 million private activity bond for the Virgin Trains USA Florida passenger rail project, the Kingston Container Terminal privatization in Jamaica and the refinancing of a concession over 23 highway service plazas in Connecticut.

Mark Spivak, Baker Botts LLP

Mark Spivak is a partner in the global projects practice in Baker Botts' Washington office. His practice focuses primarily on project development and project finance in the power generation (including renewable energy), electric energy transmission, oil and gas, LNG, pipeline and transportation industries. His clients include sponsors, developers, private equity firms and other investors engaged in the development and financing of infrastructure projects.
