 - Purchase Price and Earnouts
 - Assets, Pipeline Loans, Employees, Intellectual Property, Material Contracts
 - Office Space and Leases
 - Transition Services
- Licensing Strategy and Federal Agencies
 - Licenses and registrations maintained by buyer and seller
 - Strategies and pitfalls
 - Steps prior to closing

Consideration – Cash and Earnouts

- Cash Purchase Price
 - May be nominal valuation of FF&E; employees are the most valuable asset
- Earnouts
 - Protects the buyer from an earnings decline post-sale; allows for lower cash at closing
 - Offers a greater potential “upside” for the seller
 - Timeframe: 24-48 months
 - Possible pitfalls
 - Buy side: Carve out new business acquisitions and legacy revenue sources
 - Sell side: Capture new offices in the region; watch out for overly restrictive covenants and tax implications if the earnout is tied to employment

Earnout Metrics

- Metrics
 - Volume by branch office or by region
 - E.g., metrics based on aggregate principal balances over a set time period
 - Profit and loss allocable to branches or profit centers
 - Including gain on sale and loan level losses
 - Requires internal P&L statements and careful thinking of what income and expense items are taken into account
 - Measure by origination channel
 - Retail, wholesale, correspondent
 - Consider refinancing /recapture rates
 - Consider critical intellectual property assets

Due Diligence

- Employees
 - Identify key personnel and evaluate the cultural fit
 - Benefits, severance and compensation
 - WARN Act considerations
- Intellectual Property Assets
 - Material software and systems
 - Unique apps or origination software
- Licensing Diligence
 - Evaluate seller licenses and consider filing requirements for state regulatory agencies

Due Diligence (continued)

- Regulatory Compliance

- Consider patterns and practices that may continue with the buyer
 - More relevant if agency servicing rights are being sold
- Existing orders and understand the impact for buyer

- Material Contracts

- Lease and landlord consents - Complexities in negotiation – Critical for state licensing
- Vendor agreements
- Investor relationships and bond programs – Critical for federal agencies
- Importance of broker agreements for wholesale

Assumed and Excluded Liabilities

- Assumed Liabilities

- Use of the assets and operation of the branches after closing; obligations under material contracts; employee liabilities post-closing
- Continuation of obligations in regulatory orders may be imposed on buyers
 - How to get comfortable – Non-objection from a regulator or at least no MAE by closing

- Excluded Liabilities

- Retained by the seller – e.g., litigation matters and employee claims pre-closing
- Be wary of successor liability - Generally not an issue in limited asset / branch sales
 - Misclassification of employees can be an issue under the Fair Labor Standards Act
- Consider successor liability in sales of substantially all of the assets of a business

Employee Retention

- Diligence Fair Labor Standards Act compliance
 - Proper classification of employees as exempt/non-exempt
 - Consider possible successor liability for the buyer with a 3-year look back and multiples of damages for failure to pay overtime
- Key Employees
 - Lock in the branch managers; they wrangle the troops
 - Branch manager agreements are important for state licensing
 - Employment agreements for key employees (management and high performer LOs)

Employee Retention (continued)

- Compensation and Benefits
 - Cash retention arrangements; performance bonuses
 - May be paid by the seller or buyer
 - Payouts for accrued bonuses/commissions, benefits, vacation time
 - Comparable compensation and benefits for 6-12 months

Indemnity

- Coverage
 - Standard representation and covenant breaches
 - Retained Liabilities and known risks or specific diligence findings
 - Survival
 - Non-fundamental reps: 12-18 months; Fundamental reps: 18-24 months
 - Shorter time frames in strategic sales or if the seller is winding down
- Holdbacks, Baskets and Caps
 - Strategic deals will have some sort of limitations of liability package
 - Less common in limited asset sales

Post Closing Negative Covenants

- Non-compete
 - More common if the seller is exiting the business
 - Restriction on a certain business in a designated area
 - Typically 12-24 months (3 years is more common in stock deals)
- Non-solicit/No-hire
 - Buyer looks to prevent poaching
 - Seller is prohibited from hiring employees for 12-24 months (3 years in stock deals)
 - Buyer can also prevent poaching through compensation, commissions and benefits
- Confidentiality and Non-Disparagement

MSR Portfolio Sales

- Servicing Rights Portfolios
 - May change the economics if an MSR portfolio is included
 - Closing timing should align with the sale date
 - More difficult if the assets are being sold to different buyers
 - Consider transfer logistics and agency approvals
 - Interim servicing component; tricky with a wind down plan

Transition Services – Closing the Pipeline

- Identify Pipeline Assets
 - Locked and unlocked loans; investor consent
 - Consider timing to close loans in the pipeline
- Services to be performed post closing
 - May include obligations on both sides depending on when certain employees transfer
- Closing the pipeline (buyer provides services to seller)
 - Consider employee commissions and bonuses due with respect to the pipeline
 - Consider broker agreements - Transition plan and communications to broker agreements
 - Consider whether an IP license is necessary
