High Court Rules Courts can Consider Agreements on Penalty in Civil Penalty Proceedings

In Commonwealth of Australia v Director, Fair Work Building Industry Inspectorate and Others [2015] HCA 46, the High Court of Australia unanimously held that courts are not precluded – in civil penalty proceedings – from considering and (if appropriate) imposing penalties that have been agreed between the parties.

As a result, prosecuting authorities such as work health and safety regulators, the Fair Work Ombudsman, and the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission may enter into penalty agreements with parties who have breached civil penalty provisions of applicable legislation. Those agreements can then be produced for consideration by a court when it comes to determining the appropriate penalty.

The decision resolves an area of recent uncertainty, and is likely to encourage parties who have engaged in civil penalty breaches to resolve (rather than contest) any resulting enforcement proceedings.

Sexual Harassment Damages Exceed $330,000 in Recent VCAT Ruling

In Collins v Smith (Human Rights) [2015] VCAT 1992, the Victorian Civil and Administrative Tribunal (VCAT) awarded the complainant in a sexual harassment case over A$330,000 in damages. The decision continues the shift in approach to assessment of damages for sexual harassment contraventions which was affirmed in Richardson v Oracle Corporation Australia Pty Ltd and Tucker [2014] FCAFC 82.

This new approach reflects a recognition: 'that community attitudes regarding the impact of sexual harassment [have] changed, in particular that the adverse consequences ... can extend to loss of employment and career; severe psychological illness; and relationship breakdown.'

Applying these principles in this case, VCAT awarded general damages in the amount of A$180,000; aggravated damages of A$20,000; another A$120,000 for past and future loss of earnings and superannuation; and A$12,280 for out of pocket expenses – making a total damages amount of A$332,280. The conduct complained of involved the manager (in a small workplace with few employees) engaging in repeated attempts to kiss and embrace the complainant employee; touching her inappropriately; and sending her incessant text and phone messages containing further sexual advances.

Government Releases Reports of the Productivity Commission Workplace Relations Review and the Trade Unions Royal Commission

The Final Report of the Productivity Commission's Inquiry into the Workplace Relations Framework was released on 21 December, followed by the Royal Commission into Trade Union Governance and Corruption Final Report on 30 December.

After two years of hearings, the Final Report of the Trade Unions Royal Commission (TURC) concluded that there has been 'widespread' and 'deep-seated' misconduct on the part of Australian union officials over the last 23 years – including corruption, financial arrangements favouring the interests of unions over their members, fraudulent payments, and misappropriation of union funds.

As the federal Government has already committed to implementing the recommendations of the Trade Unions Royal Commission (TURC), while it is still weighing up its response to the Productivity Commission (PC) report. 2016 is likely to be dominated by discussion of proposals for increased regulation of trade unions. This will include lifting standards of financial probity, disclosure and accountability within unions; substantially increasing the penalties for serious breaches of these legal requirements; and establishing a specialist agency to oversee and enforce the new regulatory regime, the Registered Organisations Commission.

AUSTRALIA

21 DEC 2015 & 30 DEC 2015

In the Final Report on its wide-ranging review of Australia's federal workplace relations system, the Productivity Commission (PC) took the overall the view that the system is not fundamentally flawed – but requires 'repairs' in several key areas. These include:

- Establishing a new body, separate from the Fair Work Commission (FWC), called the Workplace Standards Commission with the functions of reviewing and varying the minimum wage and modern awards;
- Reducing Sunday penalty rates for permanent employees in the hospitality, entertainment, retail, restaurant and cafe industries to Saturday rates;
- Introducing a new statutory instrument – 'enterprise contracts' – which would enable small-medium enterprises to implement award variations without having to engage in individual or collective negotiations with employees;
- Providing employers with several new options to finalise agreements for 'greenfields' business projects, and allowing these agreements to be struck for the duration of the relevant project.

The Government is still weighing up its response to the report, as several of the recommendations may be politically risky in the lead-up to this year's federal election. Consultation will now take place with major stakeholders before the Government announces the changes that will for part of its pre-election workplace relations policy.

FWC Full Bench Sets High Bar for Industrial Action 'Cooling Off' Periods

In MUA v Patrick Stevedores Holdings Pty Ltd [2016] FWCFB 711, a Full Bench of the Fair Work Commission indicated that clear evidence will need to be provided in support of an employer's application for a "cooling off" period under section 425 of the Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth).

The parties have been negotiating since March 2015 over a new agreement for Patrick's port operations at Brisbane, Port Botany, Melbourne and Fremantle. Towards the end of 2015, the union instigated the process for taking protected industrial action in support of its bargaining claims. Action in the form of work bans and stoppages commenced in January 2016. The employer then sought a suspension of the union's action under section 425, to enable negotiations to re-commence through a 'cooling off' period.

The Full Bench overturned the decision at first instance granting the employer's application for a cooling off order. According to the Full Bench, the tribunal member below had reached an incorrect factual conclusion that the elevation of hostilities between the parties (including the union's resort to industrial action) had precluded discussion and negotiation.

The decision sets a high bar for the evidence that will be required to substantiate the employer's argument that a suspension of protected action will assist the parties to reach an agreement.

Federal Circuit Court Imposes Penalties on Employer for Underpayment of Interns

In Fair Work Ombudsman v Aldred [2016] FCCA 220, the Federal Circuit Court fined a former marketing chief executive A$17,500 for engaging three interns at below award rates of pay. The conduct of the executive which was found to be unlawful included:

- Representing to the young graphic design, multi-media and marketing interns that their terms of engagement accorded with minimum statutory employment conditions – a claim which was intended to dissuade them from checking on their legal entitlements;
- Falsifying the payslip of one of the interns, by changing her employment status.

The court imposed the penalty after an investigation by the Fair Work Ombudsman which also resulted in the executive repaying the interns around A$10,000 in unpaid wages. They had been engaged for three-month internships with the prospect of ongoing positions to follow.

Con't

AUSTRALIA

11 FEB 2016

The decision follows increased attention on the use of unpaid work experience and internships in Australia in recent years, and greater enforcement activity in this area by the Fair Work Ombudsman.

A widespread underpayment scandal has also been exposed in 7-Eleven franchises across Australia. In September 2015, the company responded to public concern about this issue by appointing an independent panel to review the wage claims of all underpaid workers, which 7-Eleven head office will repay (even though it was not the direct employer of the employees concerned).

Fair Work Ombudsman Report on 7-Eleven highlights Workplace Contraventions in Franchising Chain

The Fair Work Ombudsman (FWO) released the report of its inquiry into extensive underpayments of workers in the 7-Eleven franchise chain, which has attracted significant media attention in Australia over the last six months.

The FWO found that a number of 7-Eleven franchisees had paid their employees below minimum award rates of pay, and had falsified data to conceal these breaches of the Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) (FW Act). The FWO has brought enforcement proceedings against several franchisees (recovering around A$600,000 in back-payments for affected workers), with several more actions on foot.

The FWO also examined the potential liability of 7-Eleven head office for the underpayments occurring within its store network. Despite finding a number of inadequacies in the franchisor's conduct, the FWO found there was insufficient evidence to establish that 7-Eleven was liable as an accessory to the breaches committed by franchisees (for example, mere suspicions of general non-compliance would not be enough to establish liability).

Although not liable for the underpayments, 7-Eleven established an independent panel in September 2015 to assess employee underpayment claims. However the company disbanded the panel in May this year in order to handle the underpayment rectification process in-house.

The 7-Eleven episode raises significant issues for franchisors in managing employment issues within the franchise chain. Generally, franchisors need to strengthen obligations on franchisees to ensure compliance with workplace laws – but without going so far as to systematically acquire knowledge of the particular labour arrangements that franchisees enter into with their employees. The latter could result in franchisors becoming accessories to relevant contraventions. However, franchisors should act on any information of franchisee wrongdoing which they receive.

Full Federal Court Hands Down Important Ruling on Union Right of Entry

In Bragdon v Director of the Fair Work Building Industry Inspectorate [2016] FCAFC 64, the Full Court of the Federal Court of Australia determined that the construction industry regulator could not establish breaches of federal right of entry laws by the Construction, Forestry, Mining and Energy Union (CFMEU).

Two CFMEU officials had entered a Sydney construction site, ostensibly to discuss safety issues with employees, but without meeting various requirements under the FW Act. They acted in a manner that the regulator argued breached other provisions of that legislation relating to the conduct of union officials exercising entry rights.

However, the Full Court held that because the union officials had not explicitly indicated that they were seeking entry under the FW Act – and could not have done so because they did not hold the necessary permit under state health and safety legislation – their entry onto the site was not subject to the conditions or requirements of the FW Act. Significant civil penalties which had been imposed on the CFMEU and its two officials were therefore overturned by the Full Court on appeal.

The decision highlights that employers must not simply allow union officials to come onto worksites. Rather, the basis on which officials seek entry should always be established; and if it does not fit within any of the permitted grounds for entry under the FW Act, or any of the requirements for entry are not met, union officials should then be refused entry and asked to leave the site.

Employers continue to trip up on Bargaining Notice Requirements

In Transit (NSW) Services Pty Ltd, the Fair Work Commission (FWC) refused to approve an enterprise agreement because the notices of representational rights issued to employees at the commencement of bargaining were not in the form required by the FW Act. The notices erroneously directed employees to an incorrect website for obtaining further information about the bargaining process.

Although a seemingly trivial error, this was the latest example of a defect in bargaining notices causing problems for the subsequent approval of agreements. In other recent cases, notices were found to breach the FW Act where they had been issued on corporate letterhead (DP World Melbourne Limited [2016] FWC 385); where they included factually incorrect information relating to the proposed coverage of the agreement (WorkPac Mining Pty Ltd [2016] FWC 251); and where they improperly incorporated a form asking employees to nominate a bargaining representative (Methodist Ladies' College and IEU, 28 July 2015).

The FW Act requires strict adherence to a pro forma bargaining notice, with no changes permitted to the content of the notice. This is a critical matter for employers to get right at the outset, as many months of negotiation and bargaining with employees/unions could be unravelled if the FWC identifies concerns with bargaining notices at the final stage when approval is sought of an enterprise agreement.

Australian Election Campaign Gets Under Way with Workplace Legislation a Central Focus

Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull called a federal election for 2 July 2016, commencing a 55-day campaign triggered by Parliament's refusal to pass two key pieces of workplace legislation. Both proposed laws would implement recommendations of the 2015 Final Report of the Royal Commission into Trade Union Governance and Corruption.

The Building and Construction Industry (Improving Productivity) Bill seeks to re-establish the Australian Building and Construction Commission as a specialist regulator for the trouble-plagued construction sector, overseeing stricter constraints on industrial action, coercion and entry onto work sites by building industry unions.

The Registered Organisations Bill would establish a new Registered Organisations Commission to enforce higher standards of financial governance and probity within Australian trade unions and employer associations.

If the Coalition Government is re-elected on 2 July, these bills would be brought before a special sitting of both houses of Parliament. The Labor Opposition is firmly opposed to both bills.

First Conviction for Breach of Consultation Duty under Model Work Health and Safety Laws

In Boland v Trainee and Apprentice Placement Service Inc [2016] SAIRC 14, the South Australian Industrial Court handed down the first conviction for breach of the duty to consult with other duty-holders under Australia's model work health and safety (WHS) legislation.

The model WHS laws operate in all Australian jurisdictions other than Victoria and Western Australia. In this case, a not-for-profit organisation placed a roofing worker onto a work site where he was severely injured after some guttering he was handling came into contact with live electrical wires.

The organisation was convicted for breaching the duty (under section 46 of the model WHS legislation) to consult with the primary duty-holder over safety at the work site, and had not done enough to discharge this duty by having its field officers visit the site every three weeks. A fine of A$12,000 was imposed on the non-profit entity.

The decision is significant as most observers had considered that section 46 of the model WHS legislation was not likely to lead to a prosecution; rather, it was thought that any contraventions would be pursued as a breach of the general WHS duty applicable to persons conducting a business or undertaking.

Fair Work Commission Full Bench Rejects Coles Enterprise Agreement

In Hart v Coles Supermarkets Australia Pty Ltd and Bi-Lo Pty Ltd [2016] FWCFB 2887, a Full Bench of the FWC declined to approve an enterprise agreement that would have covered 77,000 supermarket employees. It was determined that the agreement would have resulted in a reduction in entitlements for some employees, and therefore did not pass the 'better off overall test' (BOOT), which benchmarks agreements against minimum award conditions – the most significant of the requirements for approval of agreements under the FW Act.

Although the proposed Coles agreement had been approved by around 90% of the employees and was supported by the main retail union, the Full Bench accepted evidence led by a part-time employee that the deal would result in a loss in monetary terms for him and seven other workers. Purported benefits under the agreement relied upon by Coles (e.g. study leave, domestic violence support, flexibility and managing carer responsibilities) could not be taken into account in applying the BOOT, as these benefits would make only a minor difference to the circumstances of the relevant employees.

The Full Bench found that the monetary loss for those who work primarily at times which attract lower penalty rates under the proposed agreement, than under the applicable award, would be quite significant. As the asserted benefits did not outweigh these potential reductions, the agreement did not pass the BOOT and could not be approved.

Coles was given the option of providing undertakings to the FWC that the relevant employees (and others in a similar position) would have their wages adjusted to ensure no disadvantage compared to the award. The provision of such undertakings would have enabled the FWC to approve the agreement despite its concerns about the BOOT. However on 9 June 2016, Coles announced that the changes suggested by the FWC were impractical and would not be adopted. This means that the new agreement will not come into operation, and the supermarket chain's large workforce will remain subject to terms and conditions of employment negotiated under a 2011 agreement.

The decision is important as it signals that a small group of well-organised employees can obstruct enterprise agreements covering large national employers, against the wishes of the vast bulk of the workforce. Employers therefore need to be careful to ensure that new agreements contain sufficient benefits for all categories of workers, so that the BOOT will be met and the agreement approved.

The Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Ordinance Came intoForce

The Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Ordinance (Cap. 623) ("the Ordinance") came into force on 1 January 2016.

The Ordinance applies to most types of contracts, with very limited exceptions. It reforms the privity of contract rule that only a party to a contract may enforce it. The Ordinance enables someone who is not a party to a contract to have rights under it, if:

- The contract gives that person an express right to do so; or
- A contract term purports to confer a benefit on that person.

If this is not your intention, then action is required. Standard employment contract templates should be reviewed to check that appropriate safeguards, such as an exclusion (where third parties are not intended to have any enforceable rights) or a restriction (where third parties are intended to have some enforceable rights) of the Ordinance are in place. New variations of existing employment contracts should also be checked.

The Equal Opportunities Commission ("EOC") Announced its Findings on Age Discrimination in Employment

The EOC published its report: "Exploratory Study on Age Discrimination in Employment".

The exploratory study featured a quantitative telephone survey with 401 employed persons as well as qualitative in-depth interviews with key stakeholders, including 10 employers from small-and-medium enterprises (SME), three SME employees, and four Legislative Councillors.

The study found that there is substantial support among employees across all age groups for legislation against age discrimination. According to the quantitative survey, 35% of employed persons have experienced some form of age discrimination at work in the last five years, with mature workers being most vulnerable. The most commonly experienced forms of discrimination included receiving lower salaries, being denied job promotions and being targeted for redundancy in organisational re-structuring.

Based on the research findings, the EOC made policy recommendations to the Government and also urged the Government to publicise the "Practical Guidelines for Employers on Eliminating Age Discrimination in Employment" more widely.

of Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity (SOGI) and Intersex Status". The extensive study was conducted by the Gender Research Centre of the Hong Kong Institute of Asia-Pacific Studies at The Chinese University of Hong Kong.

The study revealed that discrimination against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex (LGBTI) people is a common occurrence in Hong Kong. The study found that public opinion has visibly shifted in favour of legislation against discrimination on the grounds of sexual orientation, gender identity, and intersex status. Over half (55.7%) of the telephone survey respondents (over 1000 respondents were interviewed) agreed with legislation – nearly double the comparable figure from a decade ago. Notably, the vast majority (91.8%) of youth considered anti-discrimination legislation necessary, while nearly half (48.9%) of those with religious views also concurred.

There is currently no comprehensive legal protection against discrimination on the grounds of sexual orientation, gender identity and intersex status in Hong Kong. The EOC hopes this report will lay the groundwork for the Government to carry out a public consultation on potential anti-discrimination legislation and move on from the question of whether or not there should be legislation on the grounds of sexual orientation, gender identity and intersex status to how such legislation should be designed.

Privacy Commissioner Issued Statement Highlighting Record Number of Privacy Complaints in 2015

The Office of the Privacy Commissioner for Personal Data received a record number of complaints in 2015. There was a rising trend in the number of enquiries and complaints in relation to the use of information and communications technology ("ICT"). A number of data leakage incidents occurred during the year amounted to a contravention of data security principle. Such statistics indicated an increase in public awareness on personal data privacy protection. The rapid development of ICT and the use of big data and cloud computing will further change the ways that individuals' personal data is collected, retained and used.

Hong Kong's Employment (Amendment) Bill 2016

Hong Kong's Employment (Amendment) Bill 2016 (the "Bill") was gazetted on 12 February 2016.

The Bill, if passed in its current form, will amend the Employment Ordinance (Cap. 57) to provide that where an employee is unreasonably and unlawfully dismissed, the Labour Tribunal may make a reinstatement or re-engagement order without the consent of the employer. Currently, the Tribunal can only make such an order if the employer consents, which would be extraordinary!

If an employer refuses to re-engage a dismissed employee, then it will need to pay the employee a maximum sum of three times the employee's average monthly wages, subject to a cap of HK$50,000. This sum is on top of the monetary remedies payable to the employee currently provided in the Employment Ordinance. An order for re-engagement can be satisfied by an associated company if the dismissed employee agrees.

District Court Dismissed a Claim of Unfair Treatment and Dismissal on Grounds of Disability, Sex and Family Status Discrimination

On 4 March 2016, the District Court in Law Miu Kuen Sally v Sunbase International (Holdings) Limited (DCEO 7/2012) dismissed a claim of disability, sex and family status discrimination in relation to the unfair treatment and dismissal of an employee.

Facts

The Plaintiff ("P") was a long-serving employee of the Defendant ("D") and frequently took sick leave to undergo medical treatment. In 2009, D issued a set of guidelines ("Leave Guideline") which required all employees to submit sick leave certificates and stipulated that paid sick leave would only be granted for sick leave periods of not less than 4 days. Prior to this, D had paid all sick leaves in full and did not require sick leave certificates. In 2010, in a meeting between P and P's supervisors, P was asked to resign and, upon return from maternity leave, P's employment was terminated.

Claim

P claims the issuance of the Leave Guideline and her dismissal were targeted against her disabilities, sex and family status, in contravention of the Disability Discrimination Ordinance, Sex Discrimination Ordinance and Family Status Discrimination Ordinance.

Test

The burden was on P to prove discrimination on the balance of probabilities and the court applied the two-part test stated in M v Secretary for Justice [2009] 2 HKLRD 298, namely (i) whether less favourable treatment to the plaintiff had occurred and (ii) whether it had been caused by one of the prohibited discriminatory grounds.

Findings

The court dismissed P's claim for the following reasons:

1. The Leave Guideline was not discriminatory because (i) it complied with the Employment Ordinance so it could not be argued that D committed discrimination by complying with the law, (ii) the procedural requirements under the Leave Guideline (i.e. how to report sick leave and the need to provide a sick leave certificate) were reasonable and fair, and (3) P's employment contract stated that "other matters" (including sick leave) would be governed by company guidelines and the Employment Ordinance; and

2. Evidence revealed that P had a prolonged record of poor work performance, had behavioural problems in the workplace and had breached D's company computer guidelines by possessing a large amount of personal data on her computer. The cumulative weight of evidence indicated it was more probable than not that P was dismissed for legitimate reasons rather than as a result of discrimination against P's physical condition, sex or family status.

On 29 March 2016, the Equal Opportunities Commission ("EOC") issued 73 recommendations to the Government to reform Hong Kong's existing four anti-discrimination ordinances, which consist of the sex, family status, race and disability discrimination ordinances.

The EOC specifically highlighted 27 issues as higher priority areas for reform, which can be summarised into the following categories:

- Providing stronger and more comprehensive protection for various vulnerable groups, including people with disabilities, women, and ethnic minorities.
    - Recommendations included introducing express protection for people with disabilities who are accompanied by assistance animals and women who are breastfeeding, and expanding the protection against racial discrimination by association beyond close relatives to also cover friends, colleagues, and other associates.
- Encouraging institutional changes and addressing systemic inequality.
    - Recommendations included introducing a duty to provide reasonable accommodation for people with disabilities across multiple domains and the right of women to return to a work position after maternity leave.
- Facilitating more effective application of the anti-discrimination ordinances.
    - Recommendations included enhancing the clarity and consistency of the definition and protection against direct and indirect discrimination as well as harassment across various protected characteristics.
- Closing gaps in the existing protection against discrimination.
    - Recommendations included providing protection from racial discrimination in relation to the exercise of Government functions and powers, and providing express protection from discrimination in voting and standing for elections for persons with disabilities.

The EOC's 73 recommendations were a product of their Discrimination Law Review, which included a four-month public consultation. The aim was to simplify and modernise Hong Kong's anti-discrimination regime.

Privacy Commissioner issued Revised Code of Practice on Human Resource Management and Guidelines on Monitoring at Work

Hong Kong's Privacy Commissioner has issued a revised Code of Practice on Human Resource Management ("the Code") and a revised Privacy Guidelines for Monitoring and Personal Data Privacy at Work (the "Guidelines").

Neither the new Code nor the new Guidelines include any material change from their existing versions. The only changes are the new Code updates certain references to amendments in the Personal Data (Privacy) Ordinance (PDPO) and removes one provision of the Code that has become obsolete (namely the transitional provision exemption in relation to compliance with data access requests that expired in 2002).

As a reminder, the Code is designed to give practical guidance to data users who handle personal data in performing human resource management functions and activities. Where a data user fails to comply with the Code, a court, magistrate or Administrative Appeals Board may take that fact into account in deciding whether there has been a breach of the PDPO.

The Guidelines provide guidance on the application of the PDPO to employee monitoring and set out best practices for managing personal data obtained from such activity.

High Court Allowed Claim of Employee to Include Payment from Third Party Other Than Employer Into the Scope of "Wages"

On 12 May 2016, the Court of First Instance in Leung Ping Chuen v Good Friendship (Hong Kong) Limited and Anor [2016] HKCFI 786 considered whether a tour bus driver's revenue derived from selling souvenirs to tourists (as passengers of the coach) amounted to part of his "wages".

Facts

The employee was a tour bus driver who, in addition to driving the bus, also sold souvenirs to the tourists on the bus. Regarding the sale of souvenirs by drivers, the tour company had issued various notices and policies (which were expressly referred to in the employee's contract of employment) outlining that: (i) drivers were to purchase the souvenirs using their own money and the quantity was determined by the drivers; (ii) after stocking up , the souvenirs must be stored in on the buses, (iii) restrictions that drivers could only sell two specified kinds of souvenirs at prices pre-set by the employer; (iv) drivers must report to the employer the quantity of sales after each trip (v) drivers must turn over part of the revenue to the employer, and (vi) there were certain routes where the employers forbade the selling of souvenirs, and if a driver was assigned to that route, then the employer would issue a "allowance" for not being able to sell souvenirs.

Claim

The bus driver claimed that the money made from selling souvenirs formed part of his wages, such that he would be entitled to a higher amount of other employment entitlements including his wages in lieu of notice, long service payment, annual leave pay and holiday pay.

Findings

The Court emphasized the core principle that only payments made from the contract of employment could qualify as "wages".

The Court found that the notices and policies issued by the tour company were expressly implied into a driver's employment contract by express mention of incorporating terms in notices, policies and warning letters. Despite the drivers paying for the souvenirs with their own money, the fact that the drivers had to report the quantity of sales to the employer reflected that reality the souvenirs were in fact the property of the employer. Further, the issuing of the "allowance" for not being able to sell souvenirs on certain forbidden routes reflected the fact that selling souvenirs was part of the employment contract.

In light of the above factors, the Court held that the employer possessed a high degree of control over the selling of souvenirs to the extent that the selling of souvenirs was part of a driver's obligation under his contract of employment. The souvenir revenue in this case therefore constituted "wages".

Amendment to Labour Laws in Gujarat

The Labour Laws (Gujarat Amendment) Act, 2015 came into effect from 30 December 2015, incorporating changes to various labour laws applicable in the State of Gujarat.

The salient features of the amendment include:

- The limitation period for raising an industrial dispute in relation to a dismissal, discharge etc., by an individual workman under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 (the ID Act) has been decreased from 3 years to 1 year;
- The ID Act as applicable in Gujarat had special provisions applicable to establishments set up in Special Economic Zones (SEZ). These establishments were exempt from providing a notification to the Government at the time of termination of workmen level employees on grounds of redundancy (which is required for all other commercial establishments). However, the SEZ units were required to pay 'retrenchment compensation' of 45 days wages for every year of service to such workmen, though other establishments are only required to pay retrenchment compensation of 30 days' wages for every year of service. After the Amendment in 2015, these special provisions now apply to workmen employed in industrial establishments located in Special Investment Regions, National Manufacturing and Investment Zones and 100% export-oriented units as well. The amount of retrenchment compensation payable by such entities has been further increased to 60 days wages for every year of service;
- Monetary penalties under various labour laws have been increased under the amendment; and
- Provisions related to compounding of offences have been included with respect to offences under various labour laws.

Amendment to the Payment of Bonus Act, 1965 (the PB Act)

The PB Act provides for the payment of bonus to persons employed in establishments having 20 or more employees. Prior to the Payment of Bonus (Amendment) Act, 2015 (the Amendment Act), employees earning INR 10,000 or less per month were eligible to receive a bonus. Under the Amendment Act, the wage threshold for determining eligibility of employees has been revised from INR 10,000 to INR 21,000 per month, covering a larger pool of employees. Further, the maximum bonus payable under the PB Act was 20% of the wages of the employee, subject to a wage of ceiling of INR 3,500 per month. The minimum bonus payment was also capped at 8.33% of INR 3,500 per month (assuming the employee earns more than INR 3,500 per month) or INR 100, whichever is higher. The calculation ceiling of INR 3,500 has now been doubled to INR 7,000 per month "or the minimum wage for the scheduled employment, as fixed by the appropriate Government" (whichever is higher). Therefore, the cost associated with bonus payments could double (or be greater still, depending on applicable minimum wages).

The Amendment Act was brought into retrospective effect from 1 April 2014. This retrospective nature of the Amendment Act has met with opposition from employer groups. Writ petitions have been filed challenging the retrospective application, and the Introduction of the Stress Check System

Amendments to Japan's Industrial Safety and Health Act ("Act") regarding the stress check system came into force on 1 December 2015. The amendments require an employer having a place of business employing 50 or more regular employees (i.e., all permanent employees and certain fixed-term employees who have been, or are expected to be, employed by the employer for one year or more and whose weekly working hours are 75% or more of those of the permanent employees) to offer an annual stress check to the regular employees at the relevant place of business. The purpose of the stress check system is to give regular employees an opportunity to gain awareness of their stress levels and to prevent work-related mental illness.

Employers coming within the scope of the stress check requirements are required to implement the stress check system through the following steps:

- Announce to employees a basic policy explaining that the employer will offer stress checks in accordance with the Act and other relevant laws and regulations;
- Establish a health committee (if not already in existence at the relevant place of business) and have the committee prepared internal rules regarding the stress check system;
- Conduct a stress check by requesting the regular employees to fill out a brief survey designed to identify the stress level of employees and having the results submitted directly to a medical professional (e.g., a medical doctor, medical nurse or any other medical professional) who will review the sheets and inform each employee directly of his/her diagnosis;
- Arrange a face-to-face assessment with a medical doctor at the request of any employee who has been diagnosed to be under high stress;
- Take corrective measures based on the recommendations of the medical doctor (if any); and
- After conducting stress checks, to submit a report to the competent labour standards inspection office regarding details of the stress checks conducted by the employer.

The first round of stress checks must be completed no later than 30 November 2016.

An employer may not obtain the results of the stress check questionnaire or the medical professional's diagnosis without the employee's consent, although any specific corrective measures which are recommended by the medical doctor pursuant to follow up checks requested by the employee must be informed to the employer. Any information regarding the stress checks obtained by the employers should be kept strictly confidential and employers are advised to take measures to limit the scope of personnel or third party vendors who are authorised to have access to such information to the minimum extent necessary for the employer to comply with its stress check obligations. Additionally, employers may not treat employees adversely (e.g., terminate their employment or refuse to renew their contracts) on the basis of reasons related to an employee's stress check results.

Act on Promotion of Women's Participation and Advancement in the Workplace

The Act on Promotion of Women's Participation and Advancement in the Workplace (the "Act") was enacted on August 28, 2015, and the part of the Act regarding private-sector employers took effect on April 1, 2016. The Act was established for the purpose of improving the current circumstances in Japan that there are a lot of women who cannot get employment or leave their jobs because of child/family responsibilities and that the female ratio of less secure workers is high and that of managing post is low.

The Act requires private-sector employers having more than 300 regular employees to do the following actions since April 1, 2016:

1. To understand the situation surrounding their female employees' participation and advancement in their workplace and to analyse any issues associated with such situation;

2. To devise an action plan taking into account and analysing such situation, to announce the plan to their employees and to the public, and to file the plan with the competent employment authorities; and
3. To announce, to the public, information regarding the situation of female employees' participation and advancement in their workplace (in order to attract talented female candidates).

In creating an action plan to take to deal with such issues, private-sector employers are required to decide:

a. The length of their plan;
b. The numeric targets; and
c. The detail of actions and implementation period.

The Act is "temporary legislation", and is only effective for a limited period of 10 years. Therefore, private-sector employers are expected to update their action plan by regularly reviewing its progress every 2 – 5 years (depending on the employer's situation).

In relation to (3) above, private-sector employers are required to update the latest statistics (of the second preceding business year at the oldest, unless there is any exceptional circumstances) at least once every year.

Moreover, if private-sector employers meet certain statutory conditions, they can be certified as an employer that is successful in encouraging female participation and advancement in their workplace.

Amendments to the Act on the Promotion of the Employment of Disabled Persons of Japan

The amended Act on the Promotion of the Employment of Disable Persons (the "Act") was enacted on June 13, 2013. These amendments aimed at adapting the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities to local legislation.

The following reforms took effect on April 1, 2016.

1. Prohibition on Discrimination against Disabled Persons
   All employers are required to give disabled persons equal opportunities with respect to recruiting and hiring. The Act prohibits employers from unreasonably discriminating on the basis of disability in determining wages, education and training, use of welfare facilities and other employment benefits. However, treating disabled persons advantageously as part of affirmative action and treating disabled persons differently by providing reasonable accommodations will not be considered unreasonable discrimination.
2. Requirement to Provide Reasonable Accommodations
   During the hiring process, if requested by a disabled person, the employer is required to take measures to accommodate the disabled person, taking into account that person's attributes. All employers are required to put in place necessary facilities, to arrange persons who provide support to disabled persons, and to take other measures to accommodate disabled persons, taking into account that person's attributes. However, employers do not need to provide accommodations when such accommodations would place undue burden on the employers.
3. Handling Grievances and Resolving Disputes
   All employers are required to make best efforts to resolve any grievances arising in relation to either (1) or (2) above, where such grievances are filed by disabled employees. If reconciliation is requested by either the employer or the disabled employee, the dispute may be referred for reconciliation by a committee of the competent employment authorities. In any event, employers are prohibited from treating disabled employees unfairly because of their requests for reconciliation.

Employment Standards Legislation

Five Acts were amended in relation to minimum entitlements and enforcement of employment standards. The amendments all came into force on 1 April 2016. The changes were as follows:

Employment Relations Amendment Act 2016

- "Availability provisions": these are provisions in employment agreements under which an employee is required to be available to work, with no minimum guaranteed hours. Now, employers can only require employees to be available if they do provide some guaranteed hours, and there are genuine reasons based on reasonable grounds for having an availability provision.
- "Secondary employment provisions": these are provisions in employment agreements under which an employer limits or prohibits the employee from working for other employers. The employer must have genuine reasons based on reasonable grounds for including such a provision. Examples of reasons in the Act include the protection of the employer's proprietary and commercial information.
- Shift cancellation: employers must now give employees reasonable notice of shift cancellations or provide reasonable compensation if the notice is not given. Employment agreements must state what the reasonable notice and reasonable compensation are.
- Penalty orders: Labour Inspectors can apply to the Employment Court for three new orders.
  - Pecuniary penalty orders: these introduce increased pecuniary penalties against employers who seriously breach minimum entitlements ($50,000 for an individual; and for a body corporate, the greater of $100,000 or three times the financial gain).
  - Compensation orders: under these the court can award compensation to an employee that they are satisfied has or is likely to suffer loss or damage as a result of the employer's breach of employment standards.
  - Banning orders: one example of where these can be used is against employers who persistently breach employment standards. They can be banned from employing people; being an officer of an employer; or being involved in the process of hiring people.
- Accessorial liability: this new form of liability means that people who are knowingly involved in a breach of employment standards can be held liable (e.g. the above orders can be issued against them). This will capture officers of companies who have gone into liquidation as a way to avoid liability, for example.
- Penalties at the Authority: employees can now seek penalties at the Authority for all breaches of minimum entitlements (previously, some penalties could only be sought by Labour Inspectors).

Parental Leave and Employment Protection Act 2016

- Duration of paid primary carer leave: the length of paid "primary carer" leave was increased from 16 – 18 weeks (this change was implemented in previous legislation, but it came into force on 1 April 2016).
- "Primary carer": this new concept includes a female employee having a baby (and their spouse/partner); as well as a person other than the biological mother who takes permanent primary responsibility for the care, development, and upbringing of a child under the age of six years.
- Preterm baby payments: there are now additional preterm baby payments for up to 13 weeks where a baby is born before the end of the 36th week of gestation.
- Threshold for paid primary carer leave: an employee will now meet the threshold if they have been employed for at least an average of 10 hours a week for any 26 of the 52 weeks just before the due date of the baby or the date they or their partner becomes the primary carer of the child under 6 permanently.
- Non-continuous employment: employment for the purposes of paid primary carer leave can now be with more than one employer and does not have to be continuous.

Con't

NEW ZEALAND

1 APR

- Negotiated carer leave: primary carers can now apply for negotiated carer leave so they can receive parental leave payments (if they would not satisfy the threshold criteria above). Negotiated carer leave can only be refused on grounds set out in the legislation.
- Availability of extended unpaid leave: extended unpaid parental leave of up to 26 weeks (inclusive of 18 weeks paid leave) is now available to employees with more than 6 months (but less than 12 months) employment.
- "Keeping in touch" days: employees can now do a total of 40 hours paid work through "keeping in touch" days for their employer during leave without being deemed to have returned to work. These hours cannot be within 28 days after the birth of the child.
- Unpaid leave flexibility: an employee may now take one or more periods of extended leave (up to their maximum entitlement) within the "applicable start date" and "applicable end date" (the applicable end date means the date on which a child attains 6 or 12 months (depending on whether the employee is entitled to 26 or 52 weeks); or 6 or 12 months after the first date the employee becomes the primary carer). Unpaid leave entitlement can be taken consecutively or concurrently with leave taken by the partner.

Wages Protection Amendment Act 2016

- Employers must now consult with employees before making any specific deductions from their wages.
- Employers cannot make any "unreasonable" deductions from employees' wages e.g. to cover customer theft.

Minimum Wage Amendment Act 2016 and Minimum Wage Order 2016

- Record keeping: a universal and simple record keeping regime was introduced under this Act and the Holidays Amendment Act 2016 for pay and leave purposes, whereby an employer must record the number of hours worked each day in a pay period, and the pay for those hours, for all employees. There is flexibility in how this is recorded e.g. for a salaried employee working regular hours, it will be sufficient to state the hours in the employment agreement.
- Minimum wage: The minimum wage for adult workers was increased to $15.25 per hour and for "starting out" (16-19 year olds under certain conditions) and trainee workers, to $12.20 an hour.

Holidays Amendment Act 2016

- As above, a universal and simple record keeping regime was introduced under this Act and the Minimum Wage Amendment Act 2016 for pay and leave purposes.

Requirement To Issue Written Key Employment Terms And Itemised Payslips Comes Into Effect

With effect from 1 April 2016, it is a statutory requirement for all employers in Singapore to issue written key employment terms and itemised payslips to their employees who fall within the ambit of Singapore's Employment Act ("EA"). In other words, all employees, except for professionals, managers or executives earning a basic monthly salary which exceeds S$4,500, must be provided with written key employment terms and itemised payslips. On this, the key employment terms that must be put in writing include job duties and responsibilities, leave entitlements and term of employment. The itemised payslip, on the other hand, must set out, the date of payment, basic salary amount, allowances and any applicable deductions. To help businesses comply, the Ministry of Manpower has issued an assistance package, and confirmed that it will adopt a light-touch enforcement in the first year.

Expansion of Permissible Grounds for Interim Severance Payment

Interim severance payments are only allowed for specific reasons stated in the Employee Retirement Benefit Securities Act ("ERBSA"). Concerns have been raised in connection with the recent introduction of the wage peak system because employees who are subject to the wage peak system would not have been allowed to withdraw interim severance payment when their wages hit their respective peaks. This would result in reduced total severance payments for these employees compared to what the employees would have been entitled to but for the adoption of the wage peak system.

The relevant provision of the Presidential Decree of the ERBSA was amended as of 15 December 2015, and took effect immediately. The amended Presidential Decree allows the interim withdrawal of a severance payment where: 1) an employer adopts a wage peak system under which an employee's wage may start to decrease at a certain age, service year or when wages hit a certain amount in exchange for extending the employee's retirement age; or 2) an employer and an employee agree to adjust the prescribed working hours by one hour per day or five hours or more per week, and the employee continues to work under the adjusted working hours for more than three months.

Recent Constitutional Court Decision on the 30-day Termination Notice Requirement for Employees Who Have Been Employed for Less Than 6 Months

On 23 December 2015, the Constitutional Court issued a unanimous decision on the constitutionality of Article 35, Paragraph 3 of the Labour Standards Act ("LSA"). This provision of the LSA stipulates that the 30-day advance notice (or payment in lieu thereof) requirement for employee termination does not apply to a monthly-paid employee who has been employed for less than 6 months. The Constitutional Court ruled that Article 35, Paragraph 3 of the LSA was unconstitutional because it would infringe the relevant employee's rights and is in violation of the principle of equality. A law declared unconstitutional loses its effect immediately, as of the date of the Constitutional Court's decision. Therefore, as of 23 December 2015, Article 26 of the LSA, which requires a 30-day termination notice, will apply to monthly-paid employees who have been employed for less than 6 months.

Presidential Order to amend the Labour Standards Act

The Presidential Order with Ref. No. Hua-Zhong-Yi-Yi-Zi 10400146731 dated16 December 2015 added Articles 9-1, 10-1 and 15-1 to the Labour Standards Act and amended Articles 44 and 46. The main points are as below:

1. Non-compete clauses are now limited to a maximum of two years. The employer must have a proper business interest to protect, the employee must have a chance to come into the employer's confidential information, and the restrictions on duration, region and scope of business activity must be reasonable. Furthermore, the employer must provide reasonable compensation to the employee in consideration of the non-compete obligation, or the obligation is deemed null and void; the reasonable compensation does not include the payments made by the employer to the employee while the employee was still working for the employer.
2. To prevent employer from forcing an employee to leave through transfers, in addition to not breaching any of the terms of the employment agreement, an employer may not have improper motive in making a job transfer for an employee. The employee's employment conditions, such as wages, may not be reduced as a result of the transfer. If the transfer is to an overly distant location, employer must provide necessary assistance to the employee; the employee and his/her family's daily livelihood interests should be taken into consideration in conducting the transfer.

TAIWAN

3. Unless any one of the following circumstances is present, an employer may not stipulate a minimum years of service requirement for an employee: (1) Employer is paying for professional training to the employee; and (2) employer will provide a reasonable compensation in consideration of a minimum service requirement. Failure to meet the above will cause such stipulation to be void. If the minimum service requirement is not met because the employment agreement is terminated for reasons not attributable to the employee, the employee is not liable for breach of such requirement or return the professional training fees.
4. Workers between 15-16 years of age are to be considered as a child worker. Workers between 15-18 years of age may not be engaged in dangerous or hazardous work.
5. Employers are required to also prepare age certification documents and legal guardian's consent letters for workers between 15 to 18 years of age.

Interpretation Regarding whether an Insured who is Unemployed or Currently on Unpaid Leave for Child Care but Currently Acting as a Responsible Person for Another Entity, may Apply for Unemployment Benefits or Unpaid Child Care Leave Compensation

The Lao-Dong-Bao-1-Zi-1050140035 Circular published by the Ministry of Labour on 21 January 2016 clarifies the uncertainties arising from whether an individual who is unemployed or currently on unpaid leave for child care but currently registered as a responsible person for another entity, may apply for unemployment benefits or unpaid child care leave compensation, due to the fact that such registration could disqualify the individual from the above benefits. The Ministry of Labour says that the applicant is still entitled to the above benefits if this other entity has certification showing that it is engaging in a non-profitable business, the applicant is not operating this entity, or as long as any earnings during unemployment/while receiving unemployment benefits are declared pursuant to Article 31 of the Employment Insurance Act at the time of applying for unemployment certification.

The main points of the amendments are as below:

ii. To assist employees taking care of work and parenting as well as complying with the government's continuing policy of promoting breastfeeding, breastfeeding may now include up to children of less than two years of age, and in addition to the stipulated resting times, the employer must provide the employee with a 60-minute period for breastfeeding (expressing milk) every day.

iii. Due to the differences in physiology and thus the length of breastfeeding required, the limitation on the number of breastfeeding times is hereby deleted.

iv. In consideration that longer working hours also entail breastfeeding (expressing milk) requirements, a new provision is added to require the employer to provide an additional 30 minutes of breastfeeding (expressing milk) time should an employee work for more than one hour in addition to regular working hours every day.

2. To provide more breastfeeding and child care services for employees and encourage employers to provide breastfeeding space, child care facilities or measures, the original requirement for employers with 250 employees or more to setup a breastfeeding room, child care facilities or measures is expanded to require employers with 100 employers or more to do so (amending Article 23).

3. As to the employer's duty to prevent sexual harassment and implement immediately effective correction and relief measures upon being apprised of such an incident, a new provision requires employers to provide official leaves to victims during the times he or she has been summoned by the judiciary to appear in court for the lawsuit arising from a sexual harassment incident at the workplace (amending Article 27).
