

The Foreign Corrupt Practices Act and the UK Bribery Act

Kathleen Harris

Head of the Fraud Business Group
Serious Fraud Office

Kathleen Harris is a senior practitioner in the field of economic crime. She is the current head of the Fraud Business Group at the Serious Fraud Office (SFO) and has worked on many of the SFO's most high profile cases. This has included taking direct responsibility for the BAe case (where she successfully prosecuted the case and resisted the Judicial Review challenge).

She has extensive experience within the Criminal Justice System in the United Kingdom, having worked as a senior prosecutor for a number of law enforcement agencies and as a senior strategic adviser at the Attorney General's Office, advising Ministers on all types of serious crime and working with Jessica De Grazia as she undertook her review of the SFO. As Head of Policy and Standards at SFO (August 2008 - January 2011) she has led on cross-cutting policy issues in economic crime with direct impact on operations, including the Attorney General's guidance on Corporate Prosecutions. She is currently working on the prosecutors' guidance to accompany the Bribery Act. She is a barrister by profession, having undertaken pupillage at a leading set of Criminal Chambers.